

INDEPENDENCE (INDY) by Renee Edel

Indy was born in a remote part of the Little Book Cliffs Wild Horse Range called Monument Rock. He did not see many humans his 1st year or so of his life. This summer, as a 2-year-old, he was kicked out of his band by the band stallion. Soon after he was seen with his new 'bachelor buddies', Tundra and Latigo, in an area of the range where the horses see many humans. He found humans fascinating, often watching us for 10-15 minutes at a time. At 1st he would lean or touch Tundra or Latigo for emotional support while watching people, but then he became more brave and curious. This horse is an absolute sweetheart, he was one of my favorites on the range.

Indy is a stunning cream colored palomino, with a fantastic build and kind eyes. He should adapt to a kind human companion very well. This horse will 'soak-up' all the love you want to give him.
